

A HISTORIC MILESTONE – JAHM IS NOW INDEXED IN SCOPUS!

PROF. GIRISH K. J. Editor-In-Chief

PROF. VASANT PATIL Executive Editor

The Journal of Ayurvedic and Holistic Medicine has reached an important milestone in its history. We are extremely grateful and pleased to tell you that it is officially indexed in Scopus, one of the most esteemed abstract and cited databases for the world's peer review literature. This perception is more than just praise. It is evidence of the tenacity, commitment and academic integrity of our vibrant academic community. It demonstrates that our goal of promoting areas of improved research and innovation in Ayurveda and holistic health is recognized worldwide.

We are very grateful: Our respected writers have strengthened the magazine with creative and perceptible works and expanded the limits of Ayurvedic understanding. The highest standards of academic publishing have been upheld by our dedicated editorial team. The clever and prominent comments reviewers support us decisively in maintaining the caliber, integrity and rigor of our publications. This performance serves as a reward for a persistent commitment to academic excellence. This accomplishment is a celebration of your steadfast dedication to academic success as well as a recognition of it. Your efforts have greatly increased JAHM's impact and credibility in the academic community and brought it to a global platform.

Now we don't relax. We strive hard to reach the highest standards and impact factor by pursuing more stringent editorial reviews, peer reviews and publishing journal according to COPE, and ICMJE guidelines. While entering this new phase, we acknowledge our commitment to foster innovation, critical discourse and international cooperation in Ayurveda and holistic health research. We work together more and look forward to continuing contributions and support.
